- ③ 판토마임
- ④ 마술
- ⑤ 성대모사

19. 밑줄 친 he가 가리키는 대상이 나머지 넷과 다른 것은?

Torres grew up in Texas in a poor family. As a child, Torres was a bookworm and loved school. One day at school, ① he told his guidance counselor about his future dream—to be a teacher. But the counselor said, “You will never be college material.” When Torres was told that, he gave up his dream. After graduating from high school, ② he got a job as a janitor at Mayfield High School, cleaning bathrooms and sweeping floors. The years went by. At 41, ③ he finally became a college student. His first professor changed his life. “Everyone in this room is capable of succeeding,” ④ he said. Now, Torres is teaching at Mayfield High School. His students love him. “Many students don't realize that I am the same man who used to sweep the floors in this school,” ⑤ he said.

21. (A), (B), (C) 각 네모 안에서 어법에 맞는 표현으로 가장 적절한 것은?

It was a cold winter morning in a busy subway station in Washington, D.C. There, clothed in jeans and a T-shirt, was a young man (A) playing / played his violin with great passion. He played for almost an hour, during which time at least a thousand people must have passed by. It seemed that hardly anyone recognized him. Most people were busily hurrying along and probably thought he was just another musician trying to make money. Even though most of the passers-by were most likely rushing to work, the scene might (B) be / have been quite different if they had known that the young musician was Tony Adamson, a world famous violinist. However, those who showed any surprise or appreciation of their good fortune (C) was / were so few that you could have counted them on one hand.

22. 다음 글의 밑줄 친 부분 중, 어법상 틀린 것은?

Can you imagine ① what life was like 200 years ago? There was no electricity, and oil lamps ② were used at night. In addition, there were no cars or telephones, so travel was mostly on foot and communication was very difficult. These days, our lives are ③ completely different. We have jet planes, cell phones, the Internet, and many more aspects of life that our ancestors couldn't even dream of. However, have all these improvements had good results? Pollution and fossil fuels have given us global warming, ④ resulted in extreme weathers. Modern medicine lets us live longer, but governments are finding it hard ⑤ to look after the increasing number of old people.

23. 다음 중 전체 흐름과 관계 없는 문장은?

A combination of certain types of clothing, footwear, friction and dry weather can cause our bodies to build up plenty of electric charges. ① This causes sudden discharges of static electricity between our hands and metal objects such as door handles. ② But most electric charges often concentrate around pointy objects like fingertips. ③ In summer, the air is more humid, and static electricity does not build up as much as during the winter. ④ Therefore, when you grab a metal handle, you had better touch it with your palm first. ⑤ The palm is relatively flat and thus far less likely to trigger a shock.

* static electricity : 정전기

24. Leadership is becoming more important in this era of change. A lot of leadership development programs have been created out of a mistaken identity between leadership and management. Leadership is not simply a matter of memorizing financial facts and adopting strategies of the past. A good leader can allow each member to share goals and encourage them to participate in decision-making regardless of their status within an organization. Leadership is an influence relationship between leaders and followers, not an authority relationship between so-called superiors and subordinates. There are no cookbooks on the invention of leadership for the future, but understanding the true nature of leadership as _____ will guide you in the right direction.

[3점]

- ① a creative mind ② spirit to venture
- ③ strong determination ④ a democratic attitude
- ⑤ willingness to sacrifice

25. When you go swimming, you are always told to be careful not to bruise yourself against the rocks. However, fish swimming in the water rarely get bruised, moving through cracks in rocks and the branches of thorny water plants. It's because they have scales on their bodies which serve as a protective layer. The toughness of these scales is determined by _____. For example, the scales of fish living in waters, where they should protect themselves from ragged surfaces, are tough. Some people even use them as a substitute for sandpaper. On the other hand, the fish which do not encounter too many rough surfaces have very soft scales.

- ① how big the fish are
- ② how much the fish eat
- ③ how fast the fish swim
- ④ how harsh the environment is
- ⑤ how intense water pressure is

26. You don't need to throw away that bath water. You only have to remember to collect the water. That's what scientists will tell us in the future, if a new technology begins to spread. It is perhaps one of the most stunning technological discoveries of our time. It is called the "biological fuel" cell, and it uses bacteria that eat up pollutants and give off electrons as they feed. The electrons then move along a circuit and produce electricity. As a result of the process, the water becomes clean again. This could mean that someday homes generate their own power and purify water by _____ through a biological fuel cell. It will give parents a whole new reason for telling their kids to take a bath!

- ① lowering water temperature
- ② recirculating used water
- ③ multiplying pollutants
- ④ recycling food garbage
- ⑤ removing bacteria from water

27. Do you want to ensure you are recruiting the right people for your company? Then, all you need to do is jump onto public transport. Dr. Fawcett, a leading psychologist, said there were definite patterns in people's behavior depending on _____ on a bus. According to him, something as habitual as getting on a bus in their daily routine can reveal what kind of person they are by exposing how they react to situations. He concluded that those at the front seats are generally forward thinkers and those at the back are rebellious types who do not like their personal space being invaded. Sitting in the middle on a bus are independent thinkers—usually younger to middle-aged passengers more likely to read a newspaper or listen to a personal music player.

- ① where they tend to sit ② whether they sit or not
- ③ which direction they look ④ when they give up their seats
- ⑤ what kind of music they enjoy

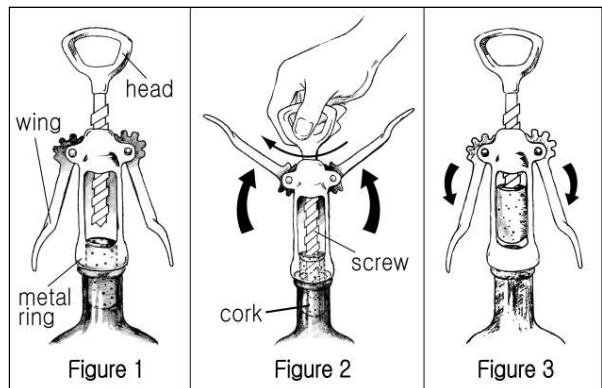

28. (A), (B), (C) 각 네모 안에서 문맥에 맞는 낱말로 가장 적절한 것은?

Certain fears are normal during childhood. That is because fear can be a natural reaction to feeling unsure and much of what children experience is (A) familiar/unfamiliar. Young children often have fears of the dark, being alone, strangers, monsters, or other scary imaginary creatures. School-aged children might be afraid when it is stormy or at a first sleep-over. As they grow and learn, with the support of adults, most children are able to slowly conquer these fears and outgrow them. Some children are more (B) sensitive/sensible to fears and may have a tough time overcoming them. When fears last beyond the (C) expended/expected age, it might be a sign that someone is overly fearful, worried, or anxious. People whose fears are too intense or last too long might need help and support to overcome them.

29. 다음 wing corkscrew의 그림에 대한 글의 내용 중, 밑줄 친 낱말의 쓰임이 적절하지 않은 것은? [3점]

There are many types of cork extractor available. The wing corkscrew, a corkscrew with ① a pair of 'wings' makes it so easy to extract a cork, even a first timer can feel like a pro. That's why it's getting popular these days. As you see in Figure 1, the ② circular metal ring holds the bottle top in place. When the corkscrew head is turned, the screw is ③ inserted into the cork, and then slowly the two wings are pushed ④ downward as in Figure 2. Pressing down the wings ⑤ draws the cork from the bottle in one smooth motion as you see in Figure 3. Then all you have to do is enjoy your wine.

30. 다음 글에 드러난 'I'의 심경 변화로 가장 적절한 것은? [1점]

I went out after late dinner as usual. I walked along a street in the center of Paris and the electric lights were much more pleasant than days of bright sunshine. I am extremely fond of the gentle touch of this darkness. I went into the woods and walked there for a long time. Then I suddenly realized that all the gas lamps had gone out. I took out my watch and it was one o'clock in the morning. I decided to go back the way I had come. I set off but I couldn't even see to find my way. "Is there anyone here?" I called out with all my might. Nobody answered. My voice was lost in the darkness without any echo, as though choked into silence by the silence.

- ① gloomy → frightened ② pleased → nervous
- ③ confused → relieved ④ delighted → bored

⑤ confident → disappointed

31. 다음 글의 빈칸 (A), (B)에 들어갈 말로 가장 적절한 것은?

Calmness can most easily occur during a state of relaxation from accepting one's situation. A woman who faces surgery in the morning may spend the night tossing and turning. (A), another woman facing the same surgery may sleep soundly because she knows she cannot control her operation and must rely on her doctor. The second woman is calm. Sometimes, a person feels calm because they are experienced. A driver in a snowstorm can handle the weather calmly because he has driven in snow many times. (B), fire fighters or police officers deal with dangerous situations every day, so when they face danger, they calmly do their jobs.

32. The next time you watch a movie, try to keep an eye out for products or brand-names in it. It is highly likely that you will see one of the major soft drinks appearing repeatedly. When you go shopping, you remember the brand name of the soft drink, and you might want to buy it. Then, you have already been affected by product placement. In many cases, the product placement results in a positive shift in brand attitude, causing viewers to buy the products. However, there is potential for a negative shift in brand attitude when consumers feel forced to see brand information too often.

33. Nearly all runaways come from homes in which there are clear problems, though there are cases where there has been little obvious trouble in the home. In any case, it is important for parents to be aware of the possibility that their child may run away, and to notice the changes that often precede it. One major indication is a sudden change in behavior. This change may be one of eating or sleeping habits. Changes in social habits can also indicate problems, particularly when a teenager becomes withdrawn from friends and outside contacts. If a young person begins to show sudden swings in mood, there is a good chance that he or she is undergoing some sort of stress that is difficult to resolve.

- ① types of family problems
- ② importance of school environment
- ③ how to counsel runaway children
- ④ ways to control unstable emotion
- ⑤ warning signs of possible runaways

34. 다음 글의 주장으로 가장 적절한 것은?

There is a report showing that in our country, each individual donates about one tenth of the money donated in advanced countries. This is because many people have no idea about giving even a small amount of money to charity. In advanced countries, children are taught to raise money for the needy by selling sandwiches, cookies or lemonade at street stands. But our children have grown up without being educated about the need to give. We need to take steps to spread the message of giving throughout our society, and educating people at an early age should be the first step in doing this. Mothers and fathers could take their children to senior citizens in need with presents. If practices like this become a way of life, we will be able to change our country gradually.

The above chart shows the top four mobile phone features that are currently used by consumers. The results will be reflected in the process of making the latest mobile phone to match consumers' taste. ① 'Music' is the most favored feature for both male and female consumers. ② As for women, 'TV tuner' is a more important reason than 'GPS' in the use of their mobile phone. ③ 'GPS' shows the largest preference gap between men and women. ④ The percentage of women who tend to use their phone for the 'TV tuner' is less than that of men. ⑤ 'Mobile commerce' is the least considered factor for both, but still it is favored more by women than by men.

36. centipede에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

The centipede is a very unusual animal. Its name suggests 100 feet or legs, but it seldom has exactly that number. Some centipedes have as few as 30 or 40; others have more than one hundred. Its long body is divided into parts. Each ring on its body shows the joining of two parts. Each part has one pair of legs. The centipede has a small head with a pair of feelers, which substitute for eyes. This extraordinary animal strikes a bug with one of its claws and kills it. Then the centipede takes its time eating its meal. The common centipede is quite harmless. Some, however, are much larger and more unpleasant to meet. Their poison fangs, located just behind the head, are dangerous.

37. Roger Bacon에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

Roger Bacon's date and place of birth are unknown but he is thought to have come from a relatively wealthy family. He studied and later taught at Oxford University, and also taught at the University of Paris. Bacon had a wide range of interests. He investigated the refraction of light through lenses, leading to the development of glasses. He was also interested in astronomy. In 1266, at the request of Pope Clement IV, he planned to publish 'Opus Maius', an encyclopedia of all science, but only fragments ever appeared. Bacon had a reputation as an unconventional scholar, pursuing learning in magic. This led to his rejection from the Franciscans and eventual imprisonment. He died in Oxford not long after his release.

[38 ~ 39] 다음 글의 요지로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

38. Have you tried Monopoly board games? Playing the game, sometimes you have exciting moments when you buy many properties and earn much money. Sometimes you have dull moments when poor progress is made and you have no chance to buy any property. In the latter situation, you are likely to feel bored if you are stuck in one place. In a way, however, it gives you a chance to prepare for the next turn without losing any money. Life is just like the game. It is thrilling, but for the most part, life is ordinary and admittedly boring. Boredom is a constitutive element of life. It will lead you to deep reflection on yourself and the society you belong to, which turns into a stepping-stone on the path to being a mature person.

39. You might think that vampires only come out at night or during Halloween. Well, guess what? They are everywhere, working 24 hours a day, using energy at your house. Vampire energy, also called standby power, refers to the electric power consumed by home electronic devices even when they are turned off or not being used. You think you have turned them off, but they are still running. The wasted standby power of household electronic devices is typically very small, but the sum of all such devices within the household becomes significant. TVs, VCRs, DVD players, computers, microwaves, coffee machines, etc. are the everyday secret users of vampire energy.

[41 ~ 42] 다음 글의 제목으로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

41. Look at the label on any product package and you will see a nutrition information section that gives a serving size for that food. Most people believe this serving size is telling you the amount you should be eating. However, it is simply a guide to help you see how many calories and nutrients you get from eating a specific quantity of that food. Sometimes the serving size on a package will be a lot less than you are used to eating. In some cases, it is perfectly OK to eat more than the serving size. For example, it is no problem to eat more frozen vegetables than the serving size because most vegetables are low in calories and fat yet high in nutrition.

42. Children at the Heritage Lakes School in Carol Stream, Illinois, decided to help the environment. The students collected old rubber-soled shoes and sneakers that could be used to make bouncy playground surfaces. Many playgrounds cushion the ground with wood chips. The students learned they could recycle rubber from old shoes to make a safer, more Earth-friendly surface. The project saved trees by creating a replacement for wood chips. And it used old shoes which might have been dumped in landfills. The class sent 471 shoes to be cut into tiny rubber chips. The rubber chips cover new playgrounds. Amy burst through the front door, shouting, "Mother! Mother!" Mrs. Rogan was in the old grandfather's room, serving him his evening soup. "Mother!" yelled Amy, rushing in on them like a hurricane. "Mother, look! The letter!" Mrs. Rogan simply stood and seemed not to find a word, staring at the letter. Grandpa Jeff dropped his spoon and bowl of soup and took a close look, his nose almost touching the letter. His eyes were wide open. Then a marvelous grin spreaded all over his face. Suddenly an explosion seemed to take place inside him. He threw up his arms and yelled "Yippee!" And at the same time, his long bony body rose up out of the bed and in one fantastic leap, this old fellow jumped on to the floor.

On the other hand, there are people who never want to move in the first place.

One person's adjustment to a new culture is not necessarily like another's. (①) In some situations, people are excited about their move. (②) Though they may feel a little sad about leaving important people and places behind, they think of the move as a new adventure. (③) They stay this way without losing the excitement, and difficulties in adjusting often don't show up. (④) Their frustration starts from the day they realize that they have to move to a new place when they are perfectly happy where they are. (⑤) It continues as they find out just how unfamiliar their new home is.

An experiment by psychologist Carol Dweck at Columbia University shows what happens to children when they are praised in two different ways. He got a group of ten-year-olds to do a series of puzzles easy enough that all could do well. Then they were told either, "You must have worked really hard," or "You must be smart at this." In subsequent tests, the children praised for their endeavor chose to do a harder set of puzzles. They enjoyed the challenge, even when they didn't succeed. What happened to the "smart" children? They declined to try the harder puzzles, choosing the one that guaranteed them good scores. When they did work on the "too hard" tests, they became discouraged and upset easily.

(A) There are many legends about the discovery of silk; some of them are both romantic and mysterious. Legend has it that once there lived a father with his daughter and a magic horse. The father had to go away on business, and his daughter missed (a) him terribly. While she was grooming the horse, the daughter spoke to him and said that she would marry anyone who brought her father home. The horse immediately ran off.

(B) The horse behaved strangely except when the daughter was around. Wondering what was causing the odd behavior, the father asked his daughter if she knew anything about it. She remembered what she had said about marriage and told it to (b) him. Furious that an animal would even think about marrying his daughter, he sold the horse to a merchant far away. The horse had stopped eating since then, and finally died. The merchant dried the horse's skin in the yard.

(C) When the horse found her father working far away, (c) he began to neigh and act as though something were wrong. Worried, the father climbed onto the horse's back and returned home. The daughter was overjoyed to see him. She told him that the horse must have known how much she had missed (d) him. The father rewarded the horse with extra food, but the animal would not eat.

(D) The skin flew from the ground all the way to the daughter, wrapped her, and carried her away. The father chased it into the woods. (e) He finally found his daughter, still wrapped in the skin, high in a mulberry tree. The girl had turned into a caterpillarlike creature. Her horse-shaped head bounced up and down, spinning a thin white thread that she wrapped around herself. The daughter had become the first silkworm. Her thread was so strong and beautiful that it was used to make clothes for emperors.

* mulberry tree : 뽕나무

Any great holiday, such as New Year's Day or Thanksgiving Day, brings its moments of stress. Some of these come from the pressure to prepare special meals and buy presents for relatives. But there is another sort of stress. One might call this 'relative fatigue.' This occurs when we realize that once again we are going to have to put up with spending our time together with unfamiliar uncles, aunts and cousins, whom we never see until they visit us for a holiday. For many of us, this is a big moral test.

We all recognize the vital importance of family. The holidays are a good time for individuals to strengthen the family. This means that when it comes to holiday celebrations in particular, we should _____. Those awkward relatives have to be included because extended families are, quite simply, a good thing. Paying attention to the uncles and aunts and all the rest underlines the message that we pass on to our children: being related to somebody counts for something.
