From the time I entered the high school, I began to take an interest in my studies and my grades improved. I started to listen to other students discuss social issues. One day, someone asked me to join the Black Culture Club where the students discussed the contributions of black people. Now my eyes were really opened. For the first time, I learned that my race had many famous people who had played an important role in world history. I was filled with a new sense of pride and self-esteem.

You probably never heard about Billy Anderson, but at one time, he was known to millions of people. He was the first movie star of westerns. He began his career with a small part in The Great Train Robbery. Though Billy became well-known for his shooting and riding, he couldn't actually ride a horse at all. He would never have made it out on the real field. But through the magic of film, his audience never knew this side of Billy. If they had known it, Billy might have been a nobody.

them in your garden. In a recent study, young kids become more willing to eat vegetables when they plant, weed, water and harvest a small area themselves. It seems that gardening lets children make a connection between what they eat and where it comes from. And this connection may make the kids more likely to think are often used by teenagers while they chat on line. By cutting down the number of letters they have to type, they can respond quickly to the comments that other people make in their chat group. Special codes used for chatting on line include the following: CU(See you), BTW(By the way), GG(Got to go), J/K(Just kidding), PAW(Parents are watching), K(OK), etc. Almost everything can be made shorter for teens who want to save precious seconds in typing.

of those people can be called heroes. They quietly set a good example for us to follow.

As the curtains went up, I took a deep breath and walked slowly toward the stage. I saw the audience clapping for me, but I couldn't hear anything at all. I sat in front of the piano with the spotlight shining on me. I felt my hands were sweaty and my heart was beating like a hammer. Moonlight Sonata by Ludwig van Beethoven had been a piece of cake before, but I was afraid to make a mistake while playing. I tried to calm down, but I couldn't.

Drinking ten or more cups of tea every day delayed the attack of cancer by almost nine years in women and about three in men. Tea also seems to protect bones and stop bacteria from sticking to teeth. In short, tea provides protection against many health threats.

the parent who puts her or his family ahead of a promising career, the neighbor who does a volunteer work every weekend, and the teacher who might have made more money at another career but chose to help others. All

One dark winter night, Mr. Potter stopped for a stranger hitchhiking on the side of the road. The stranger was dressed in black and, after he got into the car, asked if he could have a cigarette. Mr. Potter gave him one, and a lighter with which to light it. He saw the flash of the light, but then, on turning his head and looking in the mirror, was astonished to see that his passenger had disappeared. Only the cigarette lighter remained on the seat.

"This is an emergency," said a taped message over the loudspeaker. The message then told passengers they were going to land on water. It told them to get their life-jackets from under their seats and wait for further instructions. The 103 passengers were very scared when the cabin crew rushed into the aisles. A flight attendant then said that she had pushed the wrong button. Out of more than a dozen tapes, she had a false alarm and chose the message that prepares passengers for an emergency landing.

Do you want something different for dinner? In the near future you may try some space food. Scientists are experimenting with ways to grow food in space. Scientists think that astronauts will be able to live in outer space off the earth in the near future. It will cost too much to carry food to feed people living in the space. People in outer space will need to grow food for themselves. But how is it possible without soil and sunlight?

Most companies spend a lot of money advertising their products. Of course, their aim is to increase their sales. But there is a simpler but more effective way to increase their sales. It is to make the company's name cool and attractive. It must be a name that people will remember. For instance, a successful California health center that provides massages is called Nice Touch For Your Health. The Pickup Artist is a company that is doing a booming business in recycling. And You Gotta Have Art is the name of a successful graphic arts company.

oday's world, which is getting smaller day by day, is to keep an open mind on different cultures. Do you think mastering the English language will make you succeed in the global community? The answer is "No." It might make communication easier, but it is not enough. You can get along with people from other countries only when you understand their cultures.

Children who study some things too early can suffer from much stress. This stress can cause serious problems. Children may be afraid of difficult situations and shy away from them. Children have to be protected from things that stop learning. Children should learn slowly and naturally. They should not be forced to learn if they are not ready. Parents have to keep in mind that children can learn better when they are ready.
